Initiation hazing incident shakes up swim team

Chris Baum/The Flyer

Slurs and negative comments were written on the shirt of a new swim recruit at an initiation party held off-campus during Homecoming weekend.

By Justin Hennaut
A&E Editor

This past homecoming weekend, instead of enjoying the festivities, some Salisbury students fell victim to one of college's worst traditions: hazing.

When the swim team picked new recruits to join the team for the 2005-2006 season, they were invited to the team initiation party, held at a house off East College Avenue.

The new recruits arrived at the party and according to one participant, were immediately divided into groups according to gender. The boys were taken into the kitchen and forced to take a shot of some unknown alcoholic beverage.

One student refused to take part in the drinking and was forced to deal with the retribution from current team members.

"When I said I didn't want to drink the shot, which was as big as three normal shots, the one guy shoved me into the corner and held the shot over my head yelling for me to drink it," he said.

The torment only stopped when another initiate came over and ripped the drink from the student's hand.

After the other students drank their shot, they had to take turns having messages written on their shirts by team members.

One student had the words "FAG" and "drink up" written on the back of his shirt.

"It wasn't until later when I went to the bathroom to look at the shirt that I found out what had been written," said the student.

Later in the night the current team members brought out a pitcher of some mixed drink.

"They told everyone to drink it as fast as they could" said an observer.

Students were encouraged to chug as much of the drink as they could to get to the popsicle at the bottom.

After drinking the alcoholic mixtures, numerous students became ill and were forced outside to spend most of the night in the yard vomiting.

Rather than helping the sick students, members of the team laughed at the initiates for getting sick and not being able to handle the alcoholic drinks.

One student in attendance that night was so shaken up that he left early and barely made the 20 minute walk back to campus. Once back on campus he collapsed outside of Chester Hall and one University Police officer had to call an ambulance for the student.

The student later elected to leave the team that he had waited his entire freshman year to join.

"It wasn't all about this incident but this made my decision a lot easier," he said.

When asked if she was aware of the incident, Head Coach Jill Stephenson said, "I am now. I found out [about it] afterwards. All I can say is that the Athletic Department and I are looking into it."

When asked if she had anything to say to the students who decided not to be part of the team she had no comment.

Hazing Stats*

- Approximately 80% of college athletes have been subjected to hazing.

- Half of the incidents were related to alcohol and drinking contests.

- Two-thirds involved humiliating hazing.

SU students possible date rape victims

By Jodie Lehrer
Staff Writer

Three unidentified female Salisbury University students were possibly given date rape drugs around the weekend of Oct 8th at off campus parties and local bars.

Two of the cases were reported to have occurred at two were reported at large off-campus parties, while the other was at a popular bar among many SU students, "which are really the dangerous ones," according to Cynthia McCready, Nurse Practitioner of Student Health Services. "When you get in crowded bars, all of a sudden drinks are popping up everywhere."

According to McCready, two of the cases seemed to have symptoms of being given "the date rape drug," gamma hydroxybutyric acid, more commonly known as GHB. The other case was reported to have very similar symptoms to valium.

GHB has recently been deemed legal in the United States for the treatment of narcolepsy, which can make it easier to access. It can come in the form of a pill, a white powder or a liquid with no color or odor.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, common effects of this drug include drowsiness, dizziness, nausea, problems seeing, with possibly the most dangerous effect being blackouts.

"They totally can't remember anything that happened to them all night," said McCready of two of the female students. The women had friends with them who were able to make sure they went home by themselves. "Friends were filling in the blanks for them," said McCready.

In the other case, the student woke up alone and also could not remember a thing. "When you wake up as a female and can't remember, there's a possibility something happened," McCready said.

On October 18, SU will host a guest speaker on date rape, Brett Sokolow. Sokolow is the President of the National Center for Higher Education Risk Management. He speaks at campuses across the country on date rape and many topics involving sexual assault.

If someone believes they may have possibly been given some sort of drug, they should seek immediate medical care, according to McCready. "If you're not sure, the safest thing to do is to come in and be treated."

Men's lacrosse receives NCAA Division III Championship rings

Chris Baum/The Flyer

SU's mens lacrosse team was presented with their NCAA Division three championship rings on Saturday, during a ceremony held at Holloway Hall. During the ceremony, coach Jim Berkman thanked families for the support they had given the team throughout the season. He also thanked the staff of assistant coaches, personal trainers, and the team doctor who kept the team going.

A&E to spotlight Frank Perdue

Brice Stump/The Daily Times

By Sean Gossard
Staff Writer

A&E is scheduled to film and air a biography of local businessman, the late Frank Perdue.

Perdue, who died in the spring of this year, founded the Perdue chicken empire decades ago. His business is still family owned and operated in Salisbury today. By being the first to advertise chicken in 1971, he grew his father's small egg business into the largest chicken production company on the east coast.

Frank Perdue attended Salisbury University, then known as Salisbury State Teachers College, in 1937 but dropped out after two years and began working with his father again. In 1991, he handed the business over to his son Jim. The biography will focus on his family's life and how they built one of the largest chicken businesses in the country. In fact, it has been in the family's hands for three generations.

The filming of the biography brought producers from A&E to Salisbury to conduct interviews with various family members as well as residents and workers from the factory. The interview with Mitzie Perdue, Frank Perdue's wife, lasted several hours but only short segments will be in the biography.

In an article from The Daily Times, Mrs. Perdue stated, "the family has a wonderful story to tell." She believes this is an excellent way to celebrate the 85th anniversary of the company and to honor Frank's memory.

Perdue helped his business grow through his well-known ad campaigns. Slogans such as "It takes a tough man to make a tender chicken," helped the company to expand through the east coast.

Perdue's story will be aired on A&E, which is known for its television biography series. The biography will be one of a series of spotlights on famous businesses. Other subjects will include ice cream moguls Ben and Jerry, motorcycle legend Harley-Davidson and others.

The production is being done by Towers Production, who also does work with the Discovery Channel, the Weather Channel, and A&E.

Although the exact date for the biography is not yet released, it is scheduled for sometime in late October.

Overheard Do you think hazing is a problem at SU and why?

Hazing is a problem at SU. I think you're environment plays a large part with the decisions that you make. If you are surrounded by the wrong environment it is easier to make the wrong choices.
Olivia Campbell - Freshman

No. If you choose to put yourself in that situation then it's your fault.
Paul Casagrande - Senior

No, I really don't. It's not really a problem unless you put yourself in a situation, like joining a frat; in which case you should know what to expect going into it.
Elisa McCauley - Sophomore

I've never been exposed to it but I'm sure it can happen depending on what students get involved in. I don't think it happens here as bad as it may at other schools.
Shelby Lynch - Sophomore

Lack of sidewalk causes safety issues

By Contessa Crisostomo
Life & Style Editor

What makes Salisbury a great college town is that a lot of things are within walking distance. Students walk to many fast food restaurants, movie rental stores, and bars. Most of these places are conveniently located on Route 13, so students can easily go through the tunnel by Magg's Gym or utilize crosswalks to get across the street safely. However, that's where the safety ends.

Anyone who has walked along Route 13 will know there aren't any sidewalks, specifically right in front of the university. If anyone needed to walk somewhere on that street, say from Mulligan's to Hardee's, one would have to hike in the grass and through parking lots to get there. Then, there's the more dangerous way, which is walking in the road.

Since the start of the semester, I have almost hit three people because they were walking in the road on Route 13. Almost every day I see students and members of the Salisbury community walking in the right-hand lanes on Route 13 going to and from work, with the risk of getting hit by cars. With the recent rise in gas prices more people are walking instead of driving and they should feel as though they can safely do so.

On the other side of the intersection of West College Ave. and Route 13, there are sidewalks, but why aren't there any on the side where the college is? Maybe instead of repaving the road, money should have been invested in putting sidewalks on this half of Route 13. If the city of Salisbury is going to take care of their drivers, they should put the same effort into taking care of their pedestrians instead of making them traipse through grass patches, parking lots, and the right-hand lane to get where they need to be.

SU students and administrators should take interest in this problem because it is only a matter of time until we hear of one of our students or faculty members being hit by a car. If we advertise our school as being safe enough to walk short distances to places, especially to freshmen who aren't allowed to have cars on campus, we should be able to ensure they are safe when doing so. This problem needs to be alleviated. We can't wait for a tragic accident to happen before anyone takes charge.

Mr. Advice

Mr. Advice answers all your questions, even private ones, in complete confidentiality. Send your questions to: kb04128@students.salisbury.edu. Don't be shy, ask anything!

I always feel like I'm pressured to do stuff. Community service with my clubs, drink with my friends, and parents always on my tail. I do the service, have fun with my friends, but I'm not a fan of drinking, and sometimes the parents are too hard on me. I don't even give them any reason to do so. What's the deal about this? I just want people to understand what I do. The first thing I'm noticing is you're stressed, even if it's only a little bit. Just start to relax, and understand everything around you. For example, let's look at the community service deal. If you do community service with your clubs, why do you feel pressured? Do you have work to do that prevents you from joining in every community service activity? I'm pretty sure in most clubs they'll want you to do stuff, but don't feel pressured to always say yes, because you are in school. If you have work to do, then that needs to be done first. Community service is great and it makes you feel great to know you've helped out someone just because, but don't be misled around what people want you to do if you don't want to. For the drinking issue, you can still have fun with friends if you don't drink. You could also be very helpful to friends if you all go out. Designated driver is always needed if people are going out. Don't feel pressured to drink if you don't want to. If you don't feel comfortable drinking, your friends "should" be able to understand and at least accept that. Your parents, however, are a different case. They're just looking out for you. I know and understand sometimes it feels like there is always pressure from them, but you have to understand that means they care about you and want you to do well. I would be direct and honest with people if you really want someone to understand you.

Two of my friends are and were dating this one girl. In other words, she seems like she switches between the two. It seems like they were fighting for her attention, until...they actually did fight. I really want them to just chill out and move on. You have any advice on this?

Yes, I do. First, what were they thinking fighting each other? They are friends, and they are fighting over a girl. That is the childish way of handling things and someone could have gotten hurt. I understand they both may have had feelings for her, but why would they let their emotions run them over? I would ask, why would you let her get to both of you? My question is, where is she in all of this? Why would she let them fight over her? I think it's worth fighting over if she is sitting back letting this happen. If she starts about this was going to happen, then it's on your two friends. They had let their emotions run right over them to the point of fighting. I just don't feel that fighting is the most appropriate thing to do in "college," because that was a high school or probably a middle school thing. My advice to you is to ask them why they let it come to this? Is this what it comes to? Friends should fight over petty things, especially if she's switching whenever she pleases.

My child is going to college next year and I was wondering which would be better, laptop or desktop computer?

Well, there are positives and negatives to both. Laptops are small, compact, and you are able to take them with you to the library or wherever to study. Just make sure he or she knows where it is at all times. They are portable so making sure no one steals it should be of concern. Desktops aren't so you won't have to worry about that, but they are not compact, so you just can't take it to the library to study. One of the positives about desktops is the fact that they can be customized easier than a laptop. I don't know that price is too much of a factor because depending on what you want in your laptop or desktop, the price will vary. So really, if you want specific information you may need to go to a retail store or consult someone who knows well of manufacturers and their products. For most people though, it's just the decision, "which do I want?" rather than "This is better than that."

Americorps volunteer, student models with Ralph Lauren

By Kevin Banks
Staff Writer

Edward Allen IV returned to SU this semester after taking two years off and joining Americorps. Through Americorps, he has modeled with Ralph Lauren for their G.I.V.E. campaign, which encourages community service through volunteering. Allen lives off campus, but that does not stop him from being active on campus and being sociable. He is a respectful student who loves to smile and talk with other students.

What did you do during the time that you were not in school?

I worked minor construction. In 2004, I joined Americorps NCCC (National Civilian Community Corps) and did national community service in Denver. I basically served throughout the Midwest.

What is Americorps NCCC?

Americorps NCCC is a 10-month term of national community service for young adults between 18 to 24.

Why did you do Americorps?

Now Hiring

- North Fruitland Blvd.
- North Salisbury Blvd.
inside WalMart

It gave me a chance to be productive. I wanted to have learning experience outside of the classroom. Americorps gave me that opportunity, as well as the chance to travel.

What did you do while you were in Americorps?

During my term of service, I helped with the repopulation of sea turtles in Padre Island, Texas. I also worked with youth in Local Boys & Girls Clubs in Denver, and even environmental restoration to mountain landscapes in the Rockies. I was also selected as one of the Ralph Lauren Polo models unexpectedly. This was for the Ralph Lauren G.I.V.E. campaign ad, which appears in Maxim, G.Q., Blender, and Rolling Stones.

Did you enjoy modeling?

Yes, for the first time, I enjoyed it. I don't know if I could go anywhere with it, though.

Would you do it again?

Most definitely. It was a great opportunity to do Americorps. I can't explain the experience, but it was memorable. In fact, I am currently working with the local Americorps Chapter associated with SU here on campus. I'm looking forward to it this year. As for modeling, if the opportunity arises, I wouldn't mind doing it again.

What do you get at the end of your term with Americorps?

After the end of the term, members receive not only a Certificate of Completion, but also an education award. People come from all over the U.S. to join.

Contessa Crisostomo/The Flyer

Edward Allen IV returned to SU this year, after taking two years off to join Americorps where he modeled for Ralph Lauren for their G.I.V.E. campaign.

What was your most memorable moment at Americorps?

The people I met from all over the U.S. I could name at least one person in each state; talk about broadening your horizon. I loved riding around in the ATV looking for the sea turtles... the sand on one side, ocean on the other. You feel at peace.

What made you come back to SU?

The need for a degree. That was my primary reason. One can only go so far in life on limited knowledge. Why not return to broaden my educational horizon? My second reason was family... simply put. My third reason why I returned was because of some memorable and influential peers. I want to thank them for keeping me encouraged, even in my dark days.

What do you want the campus to know about you?

Well, I just want people to know I am a fair person who likes to meet people from all walks of life. I give people the same respect they show me. Don't be afraid to approach me, I'll say hi, and I don't bite.

How to avoid being a date rape victim

By Stephanie Sokerka
Staff Writer

People have various reasons for enrolling in college, but many students agree that it is to achieve an education. However, there are the select few who come to college looking to get drunk and go to parties. Let's face it: partying is a big aspect of the college lifestyle. Every day, students are faced with temptations of straying away from their schoolwork to go out and have fun with their peers. But what happens when the fun goes too far?

Many students would agree that being drugged and raped is not on their list of things to do before they graduate. If this is the case, then why is this violent crime happening in the Salisbury community?

The Salisbury University Police Department just issued a cautionary email notice last week to SU students and the community concerning incidents involving date rape drugs.

The first reported sexual assault that University Police have received in many years was in April, 2005 and it was alcohol related," said University Police Lt. Jeff Webb.

Two of the most commonly used date rape drugs are GHB (Gamma Hydroxy Butyrate) and Rohypnol (also known as "roofies"). However, there are many "mimic" date rape drugs that have the same effect. Date rape drugs are an extreme concern because the victim is completely unaware that they are being drugged. Once the drug is dropped into a drink it dissolves instantly, and is odorless, colorless, and tasteless. After the drink is consumed, many side effects can occur.

Symptoms of date rape drugs consist of loss of memory, extreme fatigue, nausea, sweating, loss of coordination, and breathing problems. The victim will have no memory of what has happened, but will have the physical symptoms of having sexual intercourse.

"The typical drugs commonly referred to as 'date rape drugs' include GHB, Rohypnol, Ecstasy, Ketamine, Methamphetamine and LDS," says Webb. "Depending on the dosage, condition of the victims, and the usage of alcohol, date rape drugs can have fatal results."

Students need to be aware that this is a huge concern. This does not mean that students should not go out and have fun, but they should always be aware of their environment.

"Since I received the email from the University Police about the incidents at our school, it makes me more cautious every time I go out," said junior Celina Ryan.

There are helpful prevention tips to keep this horrible crime from happening. "If you do attend off-campus parties or local bars, know where you are and who you are with," said Webb. "Keep an eye on your drink and your friends' drinks at all times; do not set them down and do not accept drinks that are given to you. Stay with your friends and watch out for each other."

Students agree that they should be more careful when partying. "I think girls specifically should pay more attention when they are out," says junior Katherine Bandula. "You can never be too careful, and it's sad that we have to think about this stuff... but you have to party responsibly."

Chemistry professor works to find cures

By Kevin Banks
Staff Writer

Dr. Mitchell is a down-to-earth instructor who makes sure that students get the help they need by working with students in and outside of class. He may not go easy on them, only because he really looks forward to seeing the students learn and understand. While working in the Chemistry department for the past five years, Mitchell has shown his dedication to SU, other faculty, students, and his home life.

What inspires you about chemistry?

It's everywhere you look - medicine, paints, plastics, dyes, new high-tech materials. I wanted to get into a science that taught you how to make substances that could change lives for the better.

Why did you decide to teach it?

My high school chemistry teacher was so good at explaining complicated ideas that I wanted to get that skill. It seemed like magic. First you're confused, and then he says something, and suddenly it's all clear.

What inspires you to feel that way?

They have so much potential. Students are so full of energy and interested in so much. Being around them keeps me young at heart. And they deserve so much attention and support, but sometimes they don't think they do. They'll say, "This is a stupid question but..." or "Sorry to bother you." Students are not stupid and never a bother. They're the sole reason I'm here.

It is understood that you have research students; have you and any of your students made any discoveries, new medicine, or any new pathway that could be healthier to the environment?

Yes. We have discovered a more environmentally friendly way to make two antioxidants, curcumin and BDC, that come from curry. Curcumin is in Phase II trials as a treatment to reverse Alzheimer's disease, so a better way to manufacture it would be helpful. BDC may be better than curcumin (it is on cells), and we're doing more tests with colleagues at UCLA School of Medicine to find out more. We also have made a bunch of potential anti-tuberculosis (TB) compounds. These have been sent for testing against Mycobacterium tuberculosis, which causes TB. One compound we know works, the others are derivatives of that one. Evidence suggests they will kill TB, even when it's not replicating. We'll wait and see.

Is there any kind of medical problem that you are focused on fixing?

Mostly TB. I want to wipe it out. I'm glad my group can contribute to making treatments for Alzheimer's disease, too.

What other jobs have you had, or have, besides teaching?

I worked in a biotech company and a small pharmaceutical company. I also owned and operated my own custom organic synthesis company called Synthetics, Inc. I was a post-doc in anti-cancer research at Northeastern U. in Boston. All my non-teaching jobs were in Massachusetts. Before SU, I taught at couple of other colleges, Albright and Oberlin.

What brought you to SU?

The dedication to teaching, friendly faculty in biology and chemistry, since I like to collaborate, warm weather with mild winters, and nearness to the beach.

What kind of music do you listen to?

Everything but country. I like ZZ Top, AC/DC, Bush, Soundgarden, Tracy Chapman, Aerosmith, Shawn Colvin, Eric Clapton, lots of blues artists.

What do you do on your free time?

My wife and I love going to the HBO Comedy Zone on Saturday nights at 9 p.m. in the Bottle Factory. Comedy from all over the country comes there and 9 out of 10 times they're very funny.

Did you enjoy chemistry when you were young?

Yes. I used to have a chemistry kit (it would be banned today) that let me blow up stuff in the backyard. That was great!

Is there anything you'd like the school to know about you or the classes you teach?

If I'm in the right mood, I bring my colleague Dr. Chip Munk to class, so be warned. I like students to ask me questions, lots of questions. Keep me on my toes. You deserve the best instruction you can get.

Muslim students celebrate Ramadan, purification and community

By Joshua Hughes
Staff Writer

Those who follow Islam and who are physically able to fast have been celebrating Ramadan this year since the evening of October 5, which was the official sighting of the first crescent of the new Ramadan is the ninth month in the Islamic calendar and is a time when Muslims fast, or deny themselves food, water, and sensation from sunrise to sunset.

"We abstain from food and water to purify ourselves physically and spiritually," explains Mustafa Dajani, Secretary of the Muslim Student Association (MSA) on campus. When the sun goes down, practicing Muslims will have a meal known as Iftar or break-fast, of which the initial meal is dates and water followed by a healthy full meal. "We eat soup and salad and whatever else we want," says Dajani. Sehmina Chopra, the MSA advisor, says that the process is anything but painless. "Like right now, I'm really hungry," she says.

"But when we take our first bite at Iftar, it is so delicious," adds Dajani. "We think of Ramadan as a 30-day Thanksgiving, because we are thankful for everything God gives us. [Ramadan] helps us empathize with those who are in need."

The MSA was responsible for raising 700 pounds of food for Hurricane Katrina victims and $300 for the Red Cross. For those who want to help the victims of the Pakistan earthquake, Chopra says that they will be running a "warm clothes drive" in the Commons from October 17-21.

of the victims don't even have socks," Chopra explains. "Any help is welcome."

Ramadan will end when the first crescent of the next new moon is sighted. This time is known as Eid-ul-fitr. "If Ramadan is Thanksgiving, then Eid-ul-fitr is the mother of all Thanksgivings," says Dajani. Eid-ul-fitr is a three-day feast and celebration.

For those interested in Islam, Dajani holds weekly prayers on Friday at 1 p.m. in the Spirituality Room on the second floor of the Guerrieri University Center. "Islam is all about community," explains Dajani. "I treat everyone I meet as a brother or sister."

There is also an Islam discussion class which is held by Sehmina Chopra in Caruthers room 108 every Monday from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. On November 9, the Commons Bistro will be hosting an "End of Ramadan" dinner from 5-7 p.m.

The Flyer: Vol#33 Issue 7

Cast of "Courage" impresses audience

By Kimberly Orr
Staff Writer

Robert Smith's staging of Bertolt Brecht's "Mother Courage" may very well be the best play this semester at Salisbury University.

The set, designed by the Theater 120 and 121 classes, gave the actors a wonderful jungle gym of a set to work with, including a wagon belonging to Mother Courage, in which the main action was centered around. Above the stage was a large screen that at times projected lines from the play.

In terms of the cast, the play is headed by a strong, bold, and railing Mother Courage played by Melissa Laur. She conveys the essence of Brecht's title figure who does everything in her power to stay alive and protect her children.

Laur was cast quite well and did a remarkable job.

While Mother Courage is played quite well, it is actually the play's supporting characters who seem to fare the best.

Mother Courage's two love interests, the Chaplin, played by Patrick Herb, and Cook, played by Josh Smith, both bring a sense of humor to their portrayals, which make for very interesting and compelling figures.

Similarly, Megan Davis stands out as Mother Courage's mute daughter Katrin.

Limited in her speaking, which was restricted to mumbles and shrieks, Davis did an amazing job using her body language and facial expressions to portray the tone of the scene. Her death towards the end of the play was distressing, and left the audience a bit upset.

Overall Megan Davis did an amazing job portraying Katrin.

After the show, Salisbury senior Kelly King said, "The play was awesome. Megan Davis rocked!"

Senior Courtney Justice says, "The show was amazing. The acting was phenomenal. Very intense."

It was quite intense; especially when Mother Courage must look upon Swiss Cheese's bloodied body and confirm that she does, or does not, know him.

When asked how opening night went, Steve Drapalski, who played Elif, replied, "I think it was good. There were a couple of technical issues, but all around we did really well [and] we had a great crowd so it was a good night."

Andrew Hepburn, a former theater professor here at Salisbury University said, "The staging is wonderful. I love the way the theater is set up on the diagonal like this. Hats off to the cast. It's a very tough play to do, and while I thought there are places that still needed work, the final scene is very moving."

Hats off indeed! The cast, crew, and production team did an amazing job opening night and it looks extremely promising.

The play will pick up again October 19th and continue until the 23rd, so be sure to reserve tickets by calling 410-543-6228.

Salisbury students receive one free ticket with their Gull Card. For non-Salisbury students, tickets are $10 for adults and $8 for seniors.

Comedian Christian Finnegan to crack up SU

Straight from "Best Week Ever" to the Wicomico Room

By Stephanie Sokerka
Staff Writer

It has been said that if one obtains the gift of laughter, he should share it with all because laughter is the best medicine there is. If this is the case then this Monday every SU student should be extremely healthy, because the witty comedian Christian Finnegan will be performing a stand-up show in the Wicomico Room at 9 p.m.

If the name does not ring a bell then this will. One would probably recognize Christian as a regular panelist on the hilarious show "Best Week Ever" on VH1; where he shares his input on everything from political parties to ridiculing Paris Hilton for her latest embarrassing act.

He has also made sarcastic commentary for "I Love the 80's" and "I Love the 90's," also on VH1.

As if that's not impressive enough, Christian has appeared on Comedy Central's "Chappelle's Show" as Chad; the only white roommate in the "Mad Real World" sketch.

He has served as a writer for "The Tough Crowd" with former SNL comedian, Colin Quinn, and he appears as a regular on the "Today Show."

Whatever show he does appear on, it is without a doubt it will be hilarious. Christian uses the ability to make fun of himself as a great asset to his comedic performance and this comedian on the rise is sure to obtain stardom.

Christian has traveled the world to many colleges, showcasing his talent of comedy, and now he will grace Salisbury University with his presence.

SU students are psyched that someone this big is coming to SU. "I can't believe he is coming here, he is hilarious," said sophomore Natalie Vallieres. "I love watching all those shows on VH1. I can not wait to see his show."

So this Monday night don't miss out on probably one of the funniest comedians to appear at SU.

Be there Monday Night, Wicomico Room, 9p.m. for a good time, and a crazy amount of good laughs!

Ashlee Simpson to release sophomore album Tuesday

By Alex Sidel
Flyer Photographer

"I Am Me" will hit stores on October 18 with much anticipation from her many fans.

Only one year after her first album, Autobiography, Ashlee is ready to conquer the music world once again this time showing a more mature side.

Although this past year has consisted of ups and downs for Ashlee, this album reflects how she's matured.

She once again teamed up with producer John Shanks to make an album that "everyone can relate to." She co-wrote all ten of the album's songs, each one relating to her experiences since her 2004 debut.

Songs like "Beautifully Broken" and "Catch Me When I Fall" demonstrate both sides of her feelings towards her "Saturday Night Live" debacle. On the one hand she expresses that it was ok to be broken and on the other she reveals the loneliness she experienced after being humiliated.

All in all, this album expresses Ashlee's many emotions and many musical styles that she has developed over the past year.

The album also consists of songs like "In Another Life," a romantic story about when you meet a guy and how comfortable you feel with him right away or "LOVE," a party song which shows that she still likes to have fun.

The first single off the album, already on the airwaves, "Boyfriend," is number three on TRL and shows that people haven't given up on the singer.

One Salisbury student who listened to the entire new album on mtv.com said, "I think this album shows a different side of Ashlee. She has grown and been through a lot since her first album and she uses this album to reflect her emotions."

Salisbury Junior Carolyn Check said, "Ashlee defiantly went back to her roots with this album, that rock punk pop mix we grew to love with Autobiography."

All in all, this album expresses Ashlee's many emotions and many musical styles that she has developed over the past year.

Quote this Raven nevermore

By Kevin Froehlich
Sports Editor

If I don't come away with MVP of the league, it's highway robbery. It's going to be the first time [in a long time] a defensive player wins the MVP, so watch me."

-Ray Lewis, August 2005

Oh, Ray-Ray, always the jester. It's been a while since your last joke, however. You know, the one about you not having any involvement in the murder of two people. Talk about a laugh riot, Eddie Murphy (Sport-SNL, pre-Boomerang) couldn't have brought the house down harder.

Okay, that was harsh, and possibly wrong. Still, what the hell were you blabbering about back in the idyllic days of summer? There's a reason why Lawrence Taylor in 1986 was the last defensive player to win the MVP: because defenses must play as a unit. An offense can thrive with just three or four great players, but a defense must be all-around great. One player a defense does not make, Mr. Lewis. If that was true, Dick Butkus and the Bears would've won about seven Super Bowls.

Also, your team, the predictably mediocre Baltimore Ravens, have shown that without a solid player at each defensive position, you're just not going to win that much.

And please - by the way, this goes for all you Ravens fans - don't go blaming the team's lack of success on the team's lack of an offense. The Redskins are 3-1 and their offense is as anemic as an 80-year-old man after dinner.

To be fair, Kyle Boller is the worst quarterback ever. He makes Ryan Leaf look like Steve Young. Yes, Leaf is the bigger bust, but let's not kid ourselves here, he had some talent. He's just chemically imbalanced. Boller couldn't hit snow if he fell into an avalanche.

Plus, it's also hard to get anything going offensively when the opposition knows you have no passing game and loads the line to stop the run. Makes it a tad difficult for Jamal Lewis to repeat his 2,000-yard performance from a few years ago.

By the way, what's it with Ravens players breaking the law?

No, no, no, The failure falls onto the shoulders of you and your defense, Ray. It's not Anthony Wright's fault you guys have given up, in order: 24 points to a Colts team that shies away from the end zone worse than a recovering alcoholic to a liquor store; 25 points to Tennessee...baffling; and 35 to the Detroit Lions.

In fact, the only win the Ravens have is against the Jets, and that was when Brooks "I've never even heard of myself, either" Bollinger was behind center. I'm giving 10-1 odds that both Houston and Chicago will drop 30 plus points on Baltimore this season. And I'm being generous.

As for your MVP award, Ray, let's run down your stats. One sack, zero forced fumbles, zero fumble recoveries and zero interceptions. Oh, and Terrell Owens does your dance better than you. When you add up those ball-dropping numbers, you're right, Carson Palmer, Donovan McNabb, Dwight Freney and LaDainian Tomlinson aren't deserving at all.

Here's where the lecture's going: shut up and play ball. The sport has seen enough of trash talkers who can't back it up. I feel like I'm tied to a chair and Mr. Blonde is dancing in front of me, knife in hand. Chad Johnson to the left, here I am, stuck in the middle with you, the disgruntled fan. All the jokers out there need to just shut their mouths and play the game.

You're not the '85 Bears, you're not Jordan, you're not Ali. You're not even Rasheed Wallace. You're just a bunch of chumps who need to know your role. And until you win something and prove your worth, no one wants to see your checklist of defenders who haven't stopped you.

So Ray, you may want to call the police, because in a few months there's going to be a theft. Then again, after the season you're on pace to have, it'll only be of the petty variety.

Field Hockey demands Rowan's paddle

By Noah Wood
Staff Writer

The SU field hockey team defeated Rowan 4-2 on Tuesday, rebounding from Sunday's loss to The College of New Jersey, which snapped their 44-game win streak.

The Sea Gulls worked really hard to secure the victory over the Profs, even though they had a fairly heavy lead in the first half. Within about six minutes after the first half, SU's Brittany Elliott scored the game's first goal. A little over ten minutes later, forward Tracey Lloyd scored with 9:03 left. Then, with about 2:01 to go, SU managed to score another goal, this time off a Kristina Holland shot, making the score 3-0, a great note to leave the first half. However, Rowan was coming on pretty strong at the end of the half.

"It was a tough game," said Lloyd. "Rowan always comes out hard and tough, and they're a rough team. As long as we play our game, we'll be fine and we can play around them."

The second half was a lot more difficult for the Sea Gulls. Within the first ten minutes of the game, Danielle Miranda tallied Rowan's first point. The Profs kept some steady pressure on and they scored again, Sarah Wood this time, with about 20:05 to go, nipping at the Sea Gulls' back with a score of 3-2.

Rowan kept stronger pressure on, but SU strengthened their defense in the last 20 minutes of the half. Rowan almost scored with 3:26 to go, then almost scored again with 1:13 to go, but the Sea Gulls stayed tough in their defense. Then forward Megan Powell scored with 34.8 seconds to go, giving the Sea Gulls a solid lead of 4-2 with very little time left in the game.

"The game was definitely intense but we came in there with great confidence and spirit," said freshman goalie Kristina Schweizer. "We never let down and were able to come out with a win."

"I think we brought our A game, we knew we needed to," said Dawn Chamberlain. "We were disappointed in our performance on Sunday, and we needed to prove to ourselves that we were better than our showing on that day."

Big spenders buy a bitter pill to swallow

By Matt Petersen
Staff Writer

In baseball what does $208 million get you? This season, for the New York Yankees, it got them a first round exit in the American League playoffs. And for the meager price of $124 million the Red Sox got a nice broom, given to them by the Chicago White Sox who swept the defending World Series champions in the American League Division Series. Both of the proclaimed America's teams, despite gigantic payrolls, failed to make it out of the first round of the playoffs, signaling an end, at least for this year, to the dominance of the high spending American League Eastern Division giants.

The Yankees were defeated in game five by the experienced and clutch Angels with their $98 million payroll. The difference on paper between the two teams was $110 million with the Yankees winning, but on the field the quiet stars of the Angels outplayed the mighty Yankees. The Angels' starting pitching was better, their bullpen was better, and they found more ways to score runs.

The Red Sox fared even worse against the young and energetic White Sox, whose payroll totals $750 million. Chicago swept Boston because they had better starting pitching, a deeper bullpen, and a lineup that did whatever it needed to do in order to score runs.

These results beg the question, where is this money going and why is it not producing wins? The answer to the first question is that the money is going to aging players, who have been great, but are now prone to injury and in some cases have deteriorating skills. Big contracts are too often given to players based on what they have done, not what they are going to do.

The answer to the second question, why is this money not producing wins, lies in the essence of baseball. Baseball has been, is, and always will be a sport that is accessible to the underdog. Individually, a player does not need to be a specific height or weight, does not necessarily need to be fast or overwhelmingly strong. David Eckstein is a perfect example of what determination and hard work can do for a player with less than perfect tools. Baseball is such an alluring sport for fans because they can still watch average humans find a way to do extraordinary things.

In terms of a team, baseball works the same way. Superstars are not needed to win, just consistent and clutch players. It is a game that rewards teams that play the right way, pay attention to details, and rise to the situation. The term "dirty player" refers to a ballplayer that does not have a huge contract or huge numbers, but plays hard, and most importantly is consistent. He does whatever the team needs day in and day out. It is these dirt players who win championships.

The biggest slap in the face to the Red Sox and Yankees is the Cardinals. One would expect the two largest payrolls to at least have the best teams on paper, if not on the field. But the Cardinals, with their $92 million payroll, in fact have the best team on paper, and probably the best team on the field. The Cards have the probable NL Cy Young Award winner in Chris Carpenter, and the probable NL MVP in Albert Pujols. They do have some aging stars like Larry Walker and Jim Edmonds, who are both still producing, but unlike the Yankees and Red Sox they did not look to find a superstar for every position. The Cards realized that they needed established stars, strong pitching, and a whole bunch of guys who are willing to do whatever it takes to win.

This season exemplifies what is great about baseball. Money does not necessarily win championships. I don't want to sound too negative about the Sox and Yanks, both are great organizations, and both are always in the mix at the end of the season. But, it is a tribute to baseball that the underdog can still win.

"War of the Worlds" invades comes to Salisbury University this weekend

By Justin Hennaut
A&E Editor

Released this summer, the latest Tom Cruise, Stephen Spielberg collaboration, "War of the Worlds" made a huge splash both domestically and abroad. To date the movie has broken in more than 233 million dollars.

When people heard of the concept, remaking another already successful franchise, the public was hesitant to embrace it. That is until they found out Stephen Spielberg was to be a part of it and once the public got their first glance at the teaser the excitement grew for the release of the film.

That is until Tom Cruise went off on his Scientology crusade against all things not Tom Cruise. That escapade took away from the positive buzz for the movie but it also helped give the film more publicity than the producers or the studio ever could have hoped for.

Once the movie was released and the reviews came out nothing could have slowed the momentum down one the reviews for the movie couldn't have been better.

Filmcritic.com called the movie "the greatest alien invasion movie ever." Entertainment Weekly called "War" "spooky and playfully spectacular" and the San Francisco Chronicle said "It is, simply, the alien-invasion movie to beat all alien-invasion movies."

The movie is based on the 1898 H.G. Wells book "War of the Worlds" which gained global fame when in 1939 Orson Welles read the book over the radio and caused national chaos as people thought real Martians were invading the planet.

This movie, 66 years later, does the same thing that 1938 radio broadcast did, scare the living daylight out of the audience.

While Stephen Spielberg added an underlying family plot the movie sticks with the book for the most part.

The casting for the film could not have been better.

Child actor Dakota Fanning delivers her best performance to date in this film. From the beginning as a child struggling to deal with her dead beat dad to the end face to face with the alien invasion she brings a unique talent to the film.

Tom Cruise also did a surprisingly good job in the film. His non-verbal expression was best by a long shot, each time he talked he killed the scene but his body language and expression brought depth to his character.

The cast also included Morgan Freeman, Tim Robbins, Miranda Otto and Justin Charwin.

Its no surprise that the real star of the film is the special effects.

Costing just over $150 million to make the film uses the latest effects and combines them with the brain of Mr. Spielberg for a visual effects powerhouse.

One Salisbury student, who saw the film over the summer, said "The special effects were the real star of the movie. At some parts I was blown away by the images they used."

Another student said that the film was much better than she would have ever expected from a Tom Cruise movie.

No matter what your feelings about Tom Cruise are this movie is defiantly worth seeing. Its one of those rare films which does the original book and movie a run for their money.

Men's soccer out-duels Roanoke

By Aaron Boker
Staff Writer

No. 7 Salisbury men's soccer continued their stalwart and unbeaten play this season with a 1-0 victory over Roanoke College on Saturday. The game proved to be a close and contested match all 90 minutes against a regional accredited soccer team.

"This is the fourth year in a row and every game has been like this, really close decided by one goal or two goals and both teams have lots of chances and it matters who converts their chances," said SU coach Gerry DiBartolo.

The Sea Gulls (13-0-1) would be the one to convert their chances. 2:49 into the game senior forward Chris Mills lobbed the ball parallel to the goalie's box and senior midfielder J.J. King kicked it in for the score.

"It was a great team effort; played the ball a simple one and two touch and I got lucky enough to get there, at the right place and the right time," said King.

Despite Salisbury's 1-0 advantage, Roanoke attacked to get that equalizer. The Maroons controlled time of possession in the first half but had nothing to show for it as Salisbury's defense kept the game frozen at 1-0.

The defense deflected and kicked away any curve balls Roanoke threw at them. Salisbury also had solid saves from senior goalie Jason Cranford who returned this week after missing a month due to a broken thumb.

"I had a good week of training before I came back," said Cranford. "The trainers had me stay fit and it helped me stay in my rhythm."

The Sea Gulls also got a little luck with eleven and a half minutes

The Maroons made a couple of late second half threats, but the Sea Gulls' defense, led by Cranford in goal, made several key saves as time eventually ran out on Roanoke. Cranford finished the game with seven saves making it look easy.

"I really haven't had too much to deal with, the defense is playing really great," Cranford said. "We're playing some really good teams and they keep shutting them down."

The win against Roanoke demonstrates the Sea Gulls' ability to stand up well against quality teams in the region. Clinching home field advantage for the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) tournament following the overtime win at Mary Washington, Salisbury will use the remaining three games on their schedule to show where they stand against the best and prepare for the CAC tournament in a couple of weeks.

"We are concentrating ourselves on winning the conference and getting an automatic bid into the [NCAA] tournament, that's our goal," said DiBartolo.

before halftime when a shot by the Maroons got passed Cranford and just sailed past the corner of the net.

While the defense carried Salisbury in the first half, the offense came out attacking more in the second. The offense carried the ball left and right down the field, looking for an insurance goal and bringing Roanoke's attack to a halt.

"I think in the second half we won the ball and came with speed and put them under pressure," said DiBartolo.

SEA GULL SPORTS BEAT

FIELD HOCKEY

The No. 1 field hockey team rebounded from its first loss in almost two years on Sunday with two wins during the week.

First, the Gulls (14-1, 4-0 CAC) toppled Washington on Thursday, 3-1. Brittany Elliott notched a hat trick on the day, with Kristina Holland, Tracey Lloyd and Megan Powell taking the assists.

Frostburg State was the next SU victim on Saturday, 5-1. Elliott scored twice more and also added an assist. Danielle Twilley contributed a goal and assist, Lynette Sgrignoli and Holland tallied goals, and Sarah Tracey chipped in with an assist.

The No. 7 men's soccer team won a hard-fought overtime contest at Mary Washington Thursday, 2-1.

Bill Whittington scored just 1:18 into the extra frame to give the Gulls (13-0-1, 6-0 CAC) the victory. He also had an assist. Chris Tracey scored SU's first goal, while J.J. King also added an assist. Goalie Jason Cranford, who recently returned from an injury, recorded seven saves in goal.

The women's team, however, did not fair as well. The Gulls (3-8-1, 0-3-1 CAC) could only manage a 0-0 tie on Thursday at York. Net-minder Kate Hendrickson had four saves against the Spartans.

Saturday's match at St. Mary's was a little different, as SU fell 2-1.

Brandi Sproul notched the Gulls' lone goal while Hendrickson stoned 11 shots.

The volleyball team had a rough week, finishing with just a 2-3 record.

Wednesday saw the Gulls fall to York 3-0. Brittany Mister led the way with 13 kills, while Abbey Petrecca added 36 assists and Lindsay Lawson had 17 digs. Over the weekend at the McDaniel Invitational, SU (22-8, 4-1 CAC) came away with a split, defeated Moravian and King's College, but losing to Colby and Gallaudet.

Leroy Satchell was one touchdown away from tying a school record and the Sea Gull offense amassed 627 total yards as No. 17 SU destroyed visiting Buffalo State on Saturday, 66-20.

The game-changing play occurred late in the second quarter with the Gulls up 21-14. The Bengals (1-4, 0-3 ACFC) had marched from their own 6 to the SU 40-yard line but were faced with a fourth down when Sea Gull defenders Andrew Deming and Nick Good-Malloy stuffed a run to change possession. The Gulls then went 60 yards the other way, with Satchell scoring his third of five touchdowns on the day to put SU up 28-14.

Along with his five scores, Satchell also had 189 yards on 16 carries. He now has 13 TDs on the season. Other notable rushers included Chris Newton (63 yards on seven carries), Teddy Savage (53 yards on five carries) and Ronnie Shockley, who contributed with a 48-yard touchdown run.

Quarterback Travis Peters, who has replaced the injured Dustin Johnson, is now 6-0 as a starter for SU (5-1, 3-0 ACFC). He was 6-for-9 in the air with 179 yards and two scores. His biggest connection was an 86-yard touchdown pass to receiver Joe Early. Early finished with two catches for 100 yards. Francis Bryant also had a 54-yard touchdown reception.
